The Center for Instructional Design at UTEP invites you to join “Conversations about Social Presence in Online Communities,” a discussion beginning with the presentation of an interactive course map and opening the floor for conversation of best practices employed in building online communities in distance learning.
What theory and techniques for participant engagement (Student Engagement, 2014) do instructional designers and instructors in your program employ to keep participants feeling like they are part of an online community?

- Constructivism
- Emotional Engagement
- Social Presence
- Discussion Boards
- Journaling/Blogging
- Self-Reflection on Work
What media and technology does your program or institution employ to create social presence or the “sense of being with another” (Biocca, Burgoon, & Harms, 2003, p. 456) in distance learning?

- Introduction Video for Instructor and Students
- Use of Video in Feedback and Student Discussion Response
- Collaborative Software
- Other LMS Tools
